

Dr. Prasad in the news

Before Facelift Surgery

Dr. Prasad's patient was featured in the New York Post for having facial cosmetic surgery as part of her career strategy

KAREN PASEGIO
Went under knife.

Laid-off biz execs save face

New York-based brokers, analysts and finance executives who have been axed by their blue-chip firms are turning to a blade of a different kind — a scalpel — in the hope that “quick-recovery” facelifts will help them compete.

The nation's financial meltdown prompted boutique investment banker Jack Reilly to take action on something that had been bothering him for over a year.

“I had bags under my eyes,” said the 57-year-old.

When the banking business tanked, Reilly decided to “get in fighting form” so he could face prospective employers with confidence.

Karen Pasegio, 50, who works in insurance, had a mini-facelift to regain her youthful jawline.

“You go for an interview and the person across the desk is 25 years old. You start to doubt yourself,” she said. “The lift has given me a lot of confidence.” Ginger Adams Otis